JEAN-CHRISTIAN BOURCART "DAY OF WRATH"

From the 2nd to the 25th of November 2017

“ I am in Washington with a group of anarchists to protest against Donald Trump’s inauguration. We are forced out violently by the police as we start to block the access to the National Mall. Later on, we join Black Lives Matter where certain members have tied themselves to the barriers, and we hermetically seal a checkpoint for hours. A group of Hells Angels is about to crash into us, but realise they are outnumbered and retreat. The sympathisers of Trump seem confused to see such a virulent opposition. Some try and pass through with force but are irremediably pushed back.

While Trump pours out his speech full of venom, a fine rain comes to mourn over the half-empty National Mall. I photograph Trump’s supporters with frantic frustration. Faced with this dreary and dark mass, with their fallacious and mean conceptions, my camera turns itself into a machine that degrades their image, cutting their faces, tracking their forced and uncomfortable grins, staring at their amputated humanity. These photographs are the expression of my revolt.”
